Beverly A. Hanstrom
CEO/Owner, Colorado Medical Waste
NSAC Board Member

Beverly A. Hanstrom is the CEO and sole owner of Colorado Medical Waste, Inc. Since 1992, Colorado Medical Waste has provided collection and transportation service for the disposal of medical waste to generators along Colorado's Front Range. Under her leadership, her company introduced ozone processing at its headquarters in Aurora and is the only sustainable facility in the state. Medical waste is reduced in volume by 90% with "ZERO" emissions to a confetti like residual which eliminates the public health effects and environmental impact of antiquated technologies and processes of the past. Combining 23 years of industry experience, award winning service, and cutting edge technology, her company brings medical waste management into the 21st century. She leads the industry in environmental stewardship to reduce the carbon footprint of medical waste. Colorado Medical Waste is a local, minority, woman owned small business.

Beverly has received local and national recognition for her sustainability efforts and personal achievements. She is a member of Practice Greenhealth, Conservation Colorado, Colorado Association for Recycling, the Sierra Club, the National Stewardship Action Council, the National Association of Professional Women and the Aurora Chamber of Commerce. She has successfully demonstrated her ability to navigate the challenges she has faced to implement sustainable technologies and processes. She is a pioneer in her profession and is viewed as a forward and strategic thinker who uses common sense and practical methods to achieve sustainability goals for her company, her clients and the planet.
