Doris Kim Intern

Doris joined the National Stewardship Action Council (NSAC) as an intern in June of 2023. At NSAC, Doris assists the Director of Advocacy and Communications with grant project tasks and social media content development and execution.

Doris advocates for sustainable development and political structures that ensure the continuity of the ecosystems. She seeks to find legislative solutions to the climate crisis and environmental degradation. With experience in non-profit organizations as well as businesses, she hopes to emphasize the all-around benefits of circular economies.

Doris is currently a third-year student at the University of California, Davis. She is majoring in Environmental Policy Analysis and Planning and minoring in Economics. Her major track is Environmental Policy & Politics, studying how environmental policies are created and implemented from a political science perspective. She enjoys applying scientific data and Earth's natural processes to complex social structures.
