

Victoria Reiser Associate

Victoria joined the National Stewardship Action Council (NSAC) as a full-time associate in January of 2022. At NSAC, Victoria assists the team by handling communications with stakeholders, creating social media content, and executing public education campaigns.

Victoria is seeking to create environmental solutions that have a lasting impact and is dedicated to developing methods to reduce anthropological impact to help preserve natural areas for present and future generations to enjoy. Victoria is passionate about policy and legislation that works to stimulate economic development relating to a circular economy by reducing material use and redesigning materials to be less resource-intensive.

Having studied sustainability and sustainable ecosystems at Arizona State University, Victoria has come to gain a deeper understanding of the earth's processes and the importance of environmental stewardship. She graduated with a Bachelor of Science in Sustainability, with an emphasis on sustainable ecosystems and a minor in Project Management. Her education has instilled in her the importance of building resilient communities focused on just and sustainable policies.
